Comprising 95 fascicles, the text encompasses sermons, poetic essays, and philosophical treatises that delve into the nature of reality, practice, and enlightenment.

The Importance of the "Mind Itself Is Buddha" Chapter

The Core Teachings of "Mind Itself Is Buddha"

The Non-Dual Nature of Mind and Buddha

Understanding Buddha-Nature

Buddha-nature refers to the fundamental enlightenment potential inherent in all sentient beings.

Dogen asserts that this Buddha-nature is not something external or separate but is intrinsic to the very mind itself.

Key Point: Mind is Buddha

- The mind, when understood correctly, reveals its true nature as Buddha.
- There is no need for special practices to attain Buddha-nature since it is already present within the mind.

The Illusion of Separateness

Dogen emphasizes that the perceived division between ordinary mind and Buddha is an illusion created by delusion. Recognizing the unity of mind and Buddha dissolves mental barriers and leads to direct realization.

Practice and Realization

The practice in Zen is not separate from enlightenment but is the very expression of Buddha-mind. Meditation, mindful activity, and everyday life are all manifestations of awakening.
